front, trying to find our brigade, and approached some of our breastworks, behind

In the Spring we started on the march again, and the wagon was again put in the place on the wagon trail. We went on further up in East Tennessee, and there we ran against Longstreet's Corps, and after a severe skirmish, in which our regiment took part, we were ordered to hurry. I should say the roads were in a terrible condition, and wagons could be seen stuck in the mud all along the road.

We had one wagon that looked very familiar, and on nearer inspection found it was our own, and poor "little Dutch oven" lay under a wheel, all broken to pieces, as the wagon boys told me. I said to myself, "I should say Dutch Oven. Did we miss the little "Dutchy"? I need we did, and did the boys of the other companies.

But the above reminds any of the comrades of any incident of camp life or march? I wish to have it if it does.—SILAS CROWELL, Co. 33d Ohio, Springfield, O.

radars were battering themselves that the board would be composed of men who had their distaste for that one of the men pointed never heard a gun fired in anger.

Wilbur D. Eastlick, Co. A, 13th Mich. Rifle, Mich., thinks that there are a great many who are let out on parole without a bill. These are the men who enlisted at the commencement of the war, when the pay was at its lowest, and when there was no prospect for their State. They were the first to test on many a hard-fought field, and those of them remained at the front until on floated triumphantly over every State in the West.

Most of these men are now on parole, and receive half $2 a month while others who enlisted in 1864 and '65, the inducement of big bounty, are rated at $1 a month, most of them having been in the army for a year or more before they were discharged. The former did not have. He thinks the arrearage act should again be put in force, and all honorably-discharged soldiers and sailors be given one cent a day for each day spent in the service.
